Boundary Scripts

what to say when...

Your pocket guide to holding the line (cutely).

Because 'no' is a full sentence — but sometimes you need the words gift-wrapped and ready.

Boundaries, But Make It Cute

Boundaries aren't about being mean — they're about being CLEAR (there's a difference, and your nervous system knows it). The hardest part is finding the words when your heart is pounding and Aunt Linda is staring at you. So here they are — pocket-sized power phrases, ready to go. Practice them in the mirror. Screenshot your favorites. Whisper them like spells. And remember: a boundary without enforcement is just a suggestion with extra steps.

Saying No

the word is a full sentence

The classic: "I can't do that, but thank you for thinking of me!" (Smile. Mean it. Move on.)

The closed door: "That doesn't work for me. I hope you find what you need!" (No explanation owed, babe.)

The guilt-trip diffuser: "I get that you're disappointed — and my answer is still no." (Broken-record energy. It works.)

The pause button: "Let me check and get back to you." (Translation: I'm deciding on MY terms, not under pressure.)

With Family

love them. still hold the line.

The topic shutdown: "I'm not discussing that anymore — let's talk about literally anything else!" (Then actually change the subject. Weather works.)

The visit with an exit plan: "We'd love to see you Saturday from 2 to 4! We'll need to head out right at 4." (The end time IS the boundary. Protect it.)

The unsolicited-advice deflector: "I love that you care — I've got this one handled." (Warm voice, firm spine.)

The past stays in the past: "I've moved past that, and I'd love our conversations to reflect that too." (Growth looks good on you.)

At Work

professional doesn't mean doormat

The priority check: "I can take this on! Which should I prioritize — this or the X deadline?" (Make them choose. Watch the magic.)

The after-hours boundary: "I'll look at this first thing in the morning!" (Then put the phone DOWN. The email will survive.)

The credit reclaim: "Thanks! Actually, that was my work on that project — happy to walk you through it." (Sweet smile. Facts only.)

The meeting opt-out: "I won't be able to make that one — send me the notes and I'll catch up!" (Protect your calendar like it pays rent.)

With Friends

real friends respect the line

The cozy decline: "I need a quiet night in tonight, but have SO much fun! Let's do next week?" (FOMO is a liar. Rest is productive.)

The venting window: "I love you and my advice-brain has about 10 minutes left in it today." (Honest + hilarious = boundary kept.)

The money no: "I'm not able to lend money, but I can help you brainstorm other options!" (Generous without going broke.)

The last-minute pass: "I can't swing that today — I need more notice for favors like that!" (Your time is not same-day delivery.)

When They Push Back

they will test it. hold it anyway.

The broken record: "I hear you. My answer hasn't changed." (Same words, same tone, every time. Boring is powerful.)

The guilt boomerang: "I'm not responsible for managing your disappointment about my boundary." (Read that twice. Let it sink in.)

The consequence: "If you keep pushing, I'm going to end this conversation." (Then actually do it. Follow-through is everything.)

The victory lap: "Holding that boundary was hard AND it was right. I'm proud of me." (Say it in the mirror. Mean it.)
